Who this space suits

A city restaurant

primary scenario

Dining rooms, kitchen, restrooms and terrace are already a working set-up. An operator walks in with a concept and a team instead of spending half a year on fit-out and approvals.

Cafe, bistro or patisserie

daytime traffic

The terrace with a retractable canopy and its own street entrance give daytime seating and a shopfront independent of the hotel's rhythm.

Banquets and events

evening utilisation

Two rooms are separated by glazed partitions, so one can be closed for a private event while the other keeps trading.

Working with hotel guests

subject to agreement with the hotel

A direct door from the lobby brings a steady flow of in-house guests and delegations. Participation in breakfasts and room service is agreed separately with the hotel.

Deal structure

Lease

The space is available for lease only, as a whole. Rent and lease term are discussed individually: leave your contacts and we will send the terms.

What is already in place

Furniture for the rooms and terrace, light fittings, tableware, the bar and service counter, a professional kitchen with extraction, and guest restrooms. A detailed equipment list is provided on request.

Terms at launch

The landlord is open to discussing a rent-free period while the venue opens and builds traffic. Utility payments and marketing contributions are fixed in the lease.

LOCATION

Central Tashkent, the Mercure hotel building

Central Tashkent, the Mercure hotel building

Coordinates: 41.2727553, 69.2418485

The restaurant occupies the ground floor of an operating hotel: a flow of resident guests and delegations, complemented by city footfall from the street.

The space occupies the ground floor of an operating hotel: guests and delegations arrive straight from the lobby, while city visitors use the restaurant's own street entrance.

PHOTOGRAPHS

What the space looks like

Two dining rooms with glazed partitions, a covered terrace with a retractable canopy and a professional kitchen with extraction. Furniture, light fittings, tableware, the bar and the service counter stay for the new tenant: the venue can be opened rather than built.

The photographs were taken on site. They do not constitute a public offer.

RESTAURANT

Shall we discuss the space?
